THE DEATH OF DANIEL GARMAN

Passes Away at the Advanced Age of 87.

52 YEARS A MASON

A Prominent Business Man and Hotel Proprietor—W. W. Montgomery Former Postmaster of Bellefonte Dead, Both Vestryman of the Episcopal Church.

MRS. LOUISA BRACHBILL ALSO DEAD

It is seldom that Bellefonte is called upon to mourn the loss of so many of its well known residents as it did from Saturday to Monday when in less than 24 hours three were called to answer the final roll call on high. They were Daniel Garman, one of our oldest citizens and well known business men, W. W. Montgomery, who served three terms as Postmaster of Bellefonte, and Mrs Louise Brachbill, probably the oldest woman in town. Below we give sketches of their lives.

DANIEL GARMAN.

On Saturday evening at twenty minutes of eight o'clock the angel of death entered the Garman home on West High Street and called hence to the spirit world the life of the venerable Daniel Garman, one of Bellefonte's oldest citizens, a former prominent hotel-keeper and a highly respected man. Mr. Garman was only confined to his bed one week and his death was due to a gradual breaking down of the system incident to old age. He gradually grew weaker until the end came when he peacefully passed away.

Daniel Garman was born near Harrisburg, Dauphin county, February 12th, 1820 and was the son of George and Rebecca Garman. He was aged at the time of death 87 years, 5 months and 8 days. He grew to manhood in Dauphin county and at twenty-three started out to seek his fortune, locating first at Jersey Shore, Pa., where he learned the jewelers trade, and was for three years in that business with his brother. He also began there his career as a liveryman which business he continued for over forty-six years. In 1856 he went to Lock Haven, Pa., and opened a jewelry store and livery stable and engaged in buying and selling horses. In 1857 while at Lock Haven he was married to Miss Louisa Schroyer, who was born in Milton, in 1834 and in 1860 he moved to Bellefonte. He was the first Adams Express Agent ever in Bellefonte and was very proud of this fact. He about this time bought a large stock of horses which enabled him to establish himself in a profitable business at once. In 1861 he purchased a hotel which he conducted until a few years ago when he retired in favor of his sons. His present hotel and opera house were built in 1887 and his residence was formerly the Wagner property one of the handsomest residences in town.

In 1886 his pleasant home was darkened by the death of his faithful partner in the joys and sorrows of life. Eight children survive him as follows: Edward, of Bellefonte; Allen S., and Robert, of Tyrone; Corney, M., of Atlantic City; Ira D., of Philadelphia; William H., of Bellefonte; Mrs. Isaac Maitland, of Williamsport, and Mrs. Rebecca Cruse, of Bellefonte. One son C. Bruce Garman died March last.

Daniel Garman in his younger days took an active part in politics, and served in the borough council and on the school board. He was an active and enthusiastic democrat. For over 52 years he was a Master Mason being a member of Bellefonte Lodge No. 268 F. & A. M.

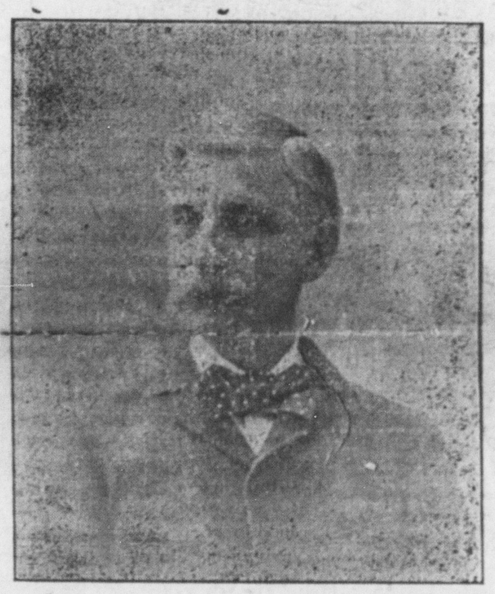
He was a member of St John's Episcopal church of Bellefonte and for over forty years served as a vestryman. Of a kindly, jovial disposition, always looking on the sunnyside Daniel Garman enjoyed the love and respect of everyone who knew him. He will be sincerely missed by family and friends.

The funeral of the late Daniel Garman took place on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the family residence on High street. There was a large attendance of friends and relatives of the deceased and many beautiful floral tributes were received. The services were conducted by Rev. Norman Stockett, of Coudersport, assisted by Rev. George Israel Brown, of Harrisburg.

The Bellefonte Lodge No. 268 F. & A. M., of which order deceased was a member for over a half century, had charge of the services.

The casket bearer were Hammond Sechler, George T. Bush, Clarence Garbrick, W. R. Jenkins, A. C. Mingle, John L. Knisely, L. E Reber and William B. Rankin, all members of the Masonic order. The vestryman of St. John's Episcopal church of which deceased was a member, acted as honorary pall-bearer.

The interment was made in the Garman family lot in the Union cemetery.



The Late W. W. MONTGOMERY,
Who Served Three Terms as Postmaster of Bellefonte.

W. W. MONTGOMERY.

On Sunday just before the noon hour all that was mortal of Wendel Whiteman Montgomery, one of Bellefonte's best citizens, and a life long resident of the town, passed to that "bourne from whence no traveler ere returns." Mr. Montgomery had been in failing health for the past year or two and seemed to be suffering from a general breaking down of the system incident to old age. He was able to be about however until about a week ago when he took to his bed and gradually grew weaker until he passed quietly away as above stated.

Wendel Whiteman Montgomery was born in Columbia, Lancaster county, August 25th, 1832, making his age at the time of death 74 years, 10 months and 26 days. He was the son of John and Catharine Montgomery, the family being of the good old Scotch-Irish origin and hailing from Ballany-Hinch, County Down, Ireland. When Mr. Montgomery was 5 years of age his family moved to Bellefonte where they continued to reside the balance of their life time.

He received his education at the old Bellefonte Academy and on leaving school entered into partnership with his father in tailoring and gent's furnishing business and later with his brother, Frank Montgomery. When the Civil War broke out he enlisted in the three months service and later was appointed a clerk in the quarter-master Generals office in Washington from 63 to 65. He was a great friend of the late Judge Hale who took a great interest in him as a young man and had him appointed to his position in Washington and later had

A HUNDRED PERISHED

When Steamers Met Off the Pacific Coast.

THE COLUMBIA SANK

In Collision with the San Pedro—Vessel went Down in Five Minutes Collision in Fog.

FRIGHTFUL SCENE AFTER CRASH

San Francisco, July 23.—More than a hundred lives were lost last Saturday night. when the steamer Columbia, bound north from this port for Portland, collided with the lumber steamer San Pedro, off Shelter Cove, Mendocino County.

Eighty other persons who were on the Columbia, were rescued after being in the water several hours.

There was a heavy fog at the time, and the San Pedro, heavily laden with lumber, struck the Columbia on the port bow with such terrific force that she was cut down to the water and sank in about five minutes.

Of the 180 passengers many succeeded in reaching the San Pedro, which remained afloat. Only 80 of them remained however, when, after many hours, the steamer Roanoke came to their rescue.

Captain H. A. Doran of the Columbia went down with his vessel.

The collision occurred at midnight when all on board save the lookout and officer on the bridge were asleep in their births.

The Columbia was steaming north at an easy rate, having left here at noon Saturday. Suddenly out of the fog loomed the dark hull of the San Pedro, southbound, which was evidently out of her course.

Whistles were blown and frantic efforts made by the helmsmen of each boat to avert the collision, but they were of no avail.

The San Pedro struck the steamer in the port bow, tearing an immense hole in her side, through which the water rushed in a great volume. Alarms were sounded throughout the passenger ship and the terrified passengers scrambled from their staterooms in an effort to escape from the doomed vessel.

But the time was too short to aid life savers. The vessel sank within five minutes of the time of the collision.

A liferaft was launched with a number of passengers on board, but only a few of the entire number on board were saved.

One hundred lives were lost.

The steamer Roanoke, carrying a number of the dead and some of the rescued passengers, reached here at 6:15 Monday morning, bringing the first news of the disaster. The dead were conveyed to the morgue.

Shelter Cove, where the collision occurred, is 179 miles up the coast. A liferaft bearing a number of the survivors, were towed to this port by the Daisy Mitchell. The San Pedro was towed to Eureka by the steamer George W. Elder.

During the earthquake and fire the Columbia was lying at the drydock of the Union Iron Works and the shock loosened some of her blocks, with the result that she was capsized. But she was entirely refitted and when she left here Saturday she carried a full list of passengers—about 300.

To Build a Home.

At a meeting of the executive officers of the Ancient Order of Hibernians of Pennsylvania, held last night, announcement was made that the state organization had decided to erect a home for super annuated members in Philadelphia and that $500,000 would be set aside out of the reserve fund for the purpose.

It was also decided to deposit $50,000 to be expened in entertaining members of the order and preparing a fitting reception when the biennial convention meets in August, 1908. There are 250,000 members of the order in Pennsylvania alone and the officers of the organization promise one of the largest celebrations the city has ever seen.

IN CAMP AT TIPTON.

Interesting Letter from the Headquarters of Co B

Tipton, July 19, 1907.
Camp "Homer J. Linsey,"

Company B, arrived in camp about 12 M. We found our tents all up and ready for occupancy. Our company streets was full of stones but the boys jumped in and in a short time had everything cleaned up in great style. We expect to have the best disiplined company in the regiment and the boys started in to be good by going to bed early, that is, until the old bucks thought the rookies had gone to sleep then they began to raise thunder, of course hardly any one got any sleep, but after the camp is thoroughly opened the boys will settle down to hard work for a few days. The non-commissioned officers are being thoroughly examined by an examining board of Regimental officers, of which former corporal Royer now Chaplain of the Regiment is a member.

Captain Royer was a little late arriving on the grounds but as soon as he got here, he began getting acquainted with the boys. He will be well liked by the men as he knows exactly how to get around them, he was a private at one time in the line and sort of built a good foundation for the position he occupies now.

Sergeant Blair and his hospital corps seem to be having a royal time and to see the way the boys live and to pass through their portion of the camp you would think that Gen. Wiley had moved down to the 5th Regiment.

As yet the scribe has not had the extreme pleasure of being tossed up in the blanket, but every dog has his day and no doubt we will be visiting Mars in a day or two.

Captain Garbrick of the famous Company B, of Bellefonte, the company that has carried the medal of honor for the past ten years, (This medal the late General Daniel E. Hastings presented, and said was to be given to the company that had the highest rating at the Spring Inspection) expects to have the old company back where she once stood at the head of the Division and if we don't carry home the "Pittsburg Dispatch" Bronze medal we will be greatly disappointed.

Lieutenants Gettig and Taylor are taking the boys out twice a day and putting them through some pretty stiff drills, and the boys who lately joined the ranks will know when they get home that camp life is not altogether what she is cracked up to be. But the boys have learned how to drill and have been thoroughly disciplined by our Captain and Lieutenants.

As every one knows Col. Taylor has brought the Fighting Fifth from next to the last Regiment in the Division to the fifth, and from all appearances he proposes to out class the Philadelphia Regiment that leads and take that place himself. He knows he can do it and he will by the next fall inspection Col. Taylor's regiment will lead the National Guards of Pennsylvania. Col. Taylor is every inch a soldier and he expects every man on his staff, every line officer and every man in the line to be the same. This will be the best disciplined camp the 5th Regiment has ever experienced, as every man knows that Taylor is not to be monkeyed with, and that what he says he means, and must be carried out to the very word. After the camp is thoroughly opened, we will send another letter home and let you know how the boys are getting along, the next time we will tell you how the privates, that is we new rookies like going up into the heavens, all the boys are well and having a royal time.

ROGER T. BAYARD.

Miss Elmore to Leave Bellefonte.

Miss Frances Elmore will leave Bellefonte and has accepted a position in the schools at Edgewood Park a suburban town of Pittsburg. Miss Elmore's many friends will be sorry to hear that she intends leaving Bellefonte but as she will practically double her present salary in the new work, we all wish her God speed. The school which she will teach in that place is in one of the prettiest suburbs of Pittsburg, made up of the residence section of wealthy business men. Miss Ellmore will be wonderfully missed by her many friends, she is an earnest christian young lady and took an active part in all matters pertaining to the church. She is also one of the brightest young lady instructors we have in our public schools today, and her place will be hard to fill. Miss Ellmore and her mother will move to Pittsburg in the fall. We wish her unbounded success in her new position.

GETTING READY FOR CAMPAIGN

Preparations Under Way For Fall Work

KNOX IS VERY ACTIVE

He Visits Headquarters—Republican Candidates Sheatz also there to Look Over Plans.

EXPECT VICTORY THIS COMING FALL

Philadelphia, July 24.—Political circles Monday took on a degree of activity in marked contrast to the lull last week. Senator P. C. Knox came in from his Valley Forge farm and met a number of friends at the Bellevue Stratford.

John O. Sheatz, Republican nominee or State Treasurer, visited the State Committee headquarters, in Locust street, during the afternoon and held a long conference with Chairman W. R. Andrews. Plans for the approaching campaign in the state were discussed. The headquarters will not be formally opened until the first week in September. Mr. Sheatz will take the stump early in the campaign and will visit as many counties as possible.

Chairman Andrews, before departing for Atlantic City Monday night, announced that John R. Williams, of Lackawanna county, had been tendered and had accepted a reappointment as secretary of the State Committee. Mr. Williams was secretary to Congressman Connell for many years. He served as secretary of the Republican State Committee in the campaign of last year. When tendered a reappointment Mr. Williams was disposed to decline, owing to pressing business engagements. At the earnest request of Chairman Andrews, however, he finally decided to accept. He spent several hours at the State headquarters during the day, preparing for the formal opening in September.

Senator James P. McNichol called on Chairman Andrews to discuss plants for organizing the Philander C. Knox Marching club, which will be made up of 250 prominent Philadelphians. The club will serve as an escort to the Pennsylvania delegation to the Republican National convention in 1908.

Colonel Andrews informed Senator McNichol that Knox clubs would be formed in Pittsburg and other towns in the State, and that it was desired to have all clubs co-operate and work in harmony with one another.

A SAD DEATH.

Little Daniel Woodring Passes Away in Philadelphia.

On Saturday afternoon word reached here of the serious illness of little Daniel Woodring, the young son of letter carrier Robert Woodring who for the past year has been undergoing treatin a Philadelpnia hospital for spinal trouble. His father at once took the train for Philadelphia but when he got there his son had passed away, having died Saturday night at 9 o'clock. He had been seriously ill only three days, suffering from tubercolocis of the stomach and bowels.

The stricken father returned Sunday evening with the remains of his son which were taken to their home on East Howard street. He is survived by his parents and one brother, Robert.

The furneral took place Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock from the house. Rev. Barry of the Lutheran church officiated. Interment in the Union cemetery.

73 Year old Minister Biking.

Rev. and Mrs. Isaac P. Neff, of Sigleryille, Saturday, mounted their bicycles and rode to the home of their newphew, William R. Neff, near Tusseyville. Rev. Neff has retired from the ministry, having attained the age of seventy-three years. The bicycle trip to Mr. Neff's and later to Centre Hall was highly enjoyed by both, This was Mr. Neff's old home, and fifty and more years ago, Rev. Neff's father Major Neff, was a prominent figure in and about Centre Hall. Rev. Neff and one sister, Evelyn, wife of James A. Grove, of Larned, Kansas, are the only ones now living of the family of eighteen children.—Centre Hall Reporter.

GREAT STATE FORESTS.

Open to Vacationists and Permits wil be Issued by Department.

As the result of its gradual accumulations of lands, Pennsylvania now has 750,000 acres in its state forest reservations, which, under certain restrictions, are open to sportsmen and vacationists. These lands for the most part are in the northeastern part of the state, along the headwaters of the Delaware, and in the central territory drained by the Susquehanna. Some are in timber and others are great barren tracks, upon which the state has undertaken to grow new forests to hold the rainfall and snow, so as to prevent river floods and washouts. Union county has a large territory now in reserve by the state.

Forest Commissioner Conklin hopes that within the next few years the public forest area will be doubled. Application to the commissioner, at his office in Harrisburg, will bring a permit for a two weeks' outing on any of these state reserves. On some of them at this season fishing is particularly good.

If a longer stay is planned, special permission is necessary. A person accepting a permit must make certain promises, of which the following are the most important:

I will violate no game, fish or forest laws of the state.

I will not destroy or in any other manner interfere with birds' nests.

All camp or other open fires will be made only in a hole or pit, one foot deep and the pit so made encircled with the earth taken out.

If I should be the last member of the party leaving the camp I will see that the camp fire or any other fire be extinguished.

I will in no case throw a lighted match cigar, cigarette, or hot ashes from a pipe upon the ground.

I will not cut down no living tree nor in any manner injure it.

That I will not attempt to erect camp until I have received my permit, and when requested will first report to a forest officer and receive and follow his instructions with respect to a camp site. I will not be a member of any camping party consisting of more than ten persons nor will I remain upon the state forest reservation lands more than two weeks without special permission in addition to my permit.

I will report to you all violations of the law of rules governing the state forest reservation lands coming under my observation.

I will erect no permanent camp or other permanent structure upon the reservation.

During the open deer season, I will use no dog of any description for hunting purpose upon the state forest reservation lands, nor will I during that time take any such dog into camp.

I will place no advertisements upon the state reservation lands.

Mrs. Mary C. Carr

On Sunday night at a little after 12 o'clock, Mrs. Mary C. Carr, widow of the late Elijah H. Carr, died from a complication of diseases. She was the daughter of Andrew and Amelia Kreamer, and was born and raised in Milesburg, where she died. At the time of her death she was aged 70 years, 9 months and 11 days. For many years she has been an earnest member of the Methodist church. She will be sadly missed by many friends who knew her as a true and helpful companion in time of need.

Surviving are one son Homer, and one sister, Mrs. Grove, of Milesburg. Funeral services were held on Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock, Rev. M. C. Piper, pastor of the Methodist church, assisted by Rev. Fry, officiating. Interment was made in the Treziyulny graveyard at Milesburg.

A Sudden Death at Zion.

Mrs. Struble had her usual health when she went to bed on Thursday night and on Friday morning she was found dead in bed.

The deceased whose maiden name was Christian Gross was born in Union county and was 68 years old. She leaves to mourn her death a loving husband but no children.

She was a conscientious member of the Reformed church and will be missed by a large circle of friends. The funeral took place Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Rev. Ambrose Schmidt conducted the services. Interment in the Zion cemetery.

THE PLEASURE OF THE ELKS

Greatly Marred by the Intense Heat of Thursday.

2500 PROSTRATIONS

From the Heat—Some were Paraders—Nurses and Ambulances Busy for Six Hours.

AN EXCURSION TO VALLEY FORGE

Philadelphia, July 19.—The parade of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks Thursday was marked during its progress by the prostration from heat of an army of persons estimated by the police and hospital authorities at 2,500 Never has the e been such a wholesale prostrating of people in the city. For six hours the police, ambulance surgeons and the Red Cross nurses were kept on the run looking after persons who collapsed under the scorching rays of the sun, and largely because of their excellent service, but one case resulted fatally, James Rowley, aged 44 years, of this city, died at the hospital after being stricken in the street. The other stricken persons are said to be in good condition with no prospect of fatal results.

The parade ground was on Broad street for a distance of three miles north and the same distance south of the city hall. The paraders countermarched the last three miles back to the city hall so that they traversed upwards of nine miles, yet few of those overcome by the heat were in the line of march.

Those who succumbed were among the spectators jammed along the street in a solid mass from one end of the line to the other. The temperature hovered around 90 degrees and the humidity was excessive and as a consequence people sweltered. Among the few paraders who were overcome were J. Harrington Walker, of St. Paul, Minn., and Henry J. Walter, exalted ruler, of the Philadelphia lodge of Elks. The other victims were chiefly from this city and the surrounding tertory. The police secured records of more than 1,000 heat cases which were handled by them or taken to the hospitals, but hundreds were cared for in the dispensaries where no record of the cases were made, while the police surgeons and nurses cared for innumerable others.

Every attention was given to the spectators to see that they were protected but it required four hours for the marchers to pass a given point and the eager people stood in the hot sun for two hours or more before the parade started. The total number in the line of march is conservatively estimated at 20,000 men, with about 125 floats.

The grand lodge installed its newly elected officers at which time it was announced that at a previous session the state association of Elks had been given official recognition. This decision on the part of the grand lodge settles a fight that has been waged for two years. The state association is restricted in its work and may not take up legislative matters or interfere with executive affairs in the subordinate lodges. Its principal work be along charitable and fraternal lines.

The grand lodge also authorized the charter committee to issue charters to Goldfield and Tonopah, Nev.

The Elks went on an excursion to Valley Forge Friday. It is also expected that announcement will be made of the prize winners in the drill contests, parade and for decorations,

Good Fishermen Great Liars

Good fishermen great liars are;
This no one will deny,
For he who ever hooked a trout
Has also told a lie.
Who has not heard some fisherman
With earnest gestures say:
"I caught the biggest ever caught,
But a bigger got away.
I played him well for an hour or more
With pliant red and strong,
And by the pull I knew he was
Just forty inches long:
As thro' the pool he flashed about
And swished his glistening side,
I saw, my friend, he surely was
Full twenty inches wide.
On his left side the spots in all
Were a thousand ninety-two,
On the other side the spots indeed
Were less by quite a few,
While, quick as lightning, here and there
He darted round and round,
I noticed he exactly weighed
An even fifteen pound,"
And when the same has made a catch
Scarce larger than a bean.
He'll swear—Its hid away, you know—
He landed seventeen.
Thus will he swear to all he meets
By Him who rules on high,
Till he believes he tells the truth,
When he knows he tells a lie;
The Good Book says all liars shall
Be doomed to deepest hell.
If, then, we there could be, no doubt,
We'd hear the anglers tell
To all the wondering imps around
And gloomy shades fordone
How each had caught the greatest fry
Ere pulled from Acheron.
So, friend, if you a saint would be,
A fishing never go.
For if you land one fish above
You'll land yourself below.

JUROR ASKED TO BE EXCUSED.

Because No One but Himself Could Milk the Cow.

A leading up-river citizen, who would make an excellent juror, came down on the early train this morning with the purpose of entering a plea to be excused from serving as a juror this week. His plea was that he had a very valuable cow, just recently fresh, which nobody could milk but himself hence he thought Judge Hall should recognize the justice of his plea and let him off and we presume put on some other man who couldn't milk. A bystander suggested that he bring the cow along with him. Howbeit he is serving as a juror this afternoon and hence we presume the court wouldn't be crowded,

They Would Look Funny.

A dispatch from Jersey Shore in Monday's North American says:

Water nymphs and sirens must go. They might have been a hit in Greece in the old days of high art, when they frolicked in babbling fountains, sounding flute-like a flageolet or a mouth-harp, but as far as Jersey Shore and Pine Creek are concerned, they are doomed.

The authorities have so declared, and husky police officers, with a keen sense of the fitness of things, will see that the order is carried out.

The authorities have so declared, and husky police officers, with a keen sense of the fitness of things, will see that the order is carried out.

Shocking reports of carelessness regarding bathing here have bobbed up from frolicsome bathers have been the cause of complaint. In fact, the costumes have been overlooked entirely, and it is this that the town authorities object to.

Passengers on the trains and trolley cars passing the river have told stories, whereby they gazed with a dread curiosity on the water frolics. Time was when the Garden of Eden effect was confined entirely to the men but now women have been added. This calls for decisive action, say those in control. So the police were given special orders Sunday to keep a lookout for those who poopooh conventional bathing garb, and officers carried out instructions to the letter.

Their names are unknown, but sleuths are on the trail. In the meantime large crowds gather at the beach to see just the manner of fun that is so seriously objected to.

Who is Greatest?

W. Paris Chambers, the famous cornet virtuous of New York city, but formerly of Harrisburg, has issued a sweeping challenge to cornetests over the entire world, for a test in playing that instrument, with a view of determing a premier. Many soloists are advertised as the "greatest" and it would be of particular interest to band and orchestra men to hear the result of such a contest.

The Modesty of Women

Naturally makes them shrink from the indelicate questions, the obnoxious examinations, and unpleasant local treatments, which some physicians consider essential in the treatment of diseases of women. Yet, if help can be had, it is better to submit to this ordeal than let the disease grow and spread. The trouble is that so often the woman undergoes all the annoyance and shame for nothing. Thousands of women who have been cured by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription write in appreciation of the cure which dispenses with the examinations and local treatments. There is no other medicine so sure and safe for delicate women as "Favorite Prescription." It cures debilitating drains, irregularity and female weakness. It always helps. It almost always cures. It is strictly non-alcoholic, non-secret, all its ingredients being printed on its bottle-wrapper; contains no deleterious or habit-forming drugs, and every native medicinal root entering into its composition has the full endorsement of those most eminent in the several schools of medical practice. Some of these numerous and strongest of professional endorsements of its ingredients, will be found in a pamphlet wrapped around the bottle, also in a booklet mailed free on request, by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y. These professional endorsements should have far more weight than any amount of the ordinary lay, or non-professional testimonials.

The most intelligent women now-a-days insist on knowing what they take as medicine instead of opening their mouths like a lot of young birds and gulping down whatever is offered them. "Favorite Prescription" is of KNOWN COMPOSITION. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

At the Summer School.

By TEMPLE BAILEY.

Copyrighted, 1907, by Mary McKeon.

"One, two, three; one, two, three," counted the teacher, taking steps daintily on the tips of her slippered toes.

The class in advanced dancing followed her with more or less precision. At the head of the line Margaret Morton, secure in the proficiency acquired by three years of training in the summer school, flung back her pretty head and smiled at the awkward young man in the opposite row.

At the foot of the line poor little Mary Cobb, teacher in a district school, with ambitions toward a physical directorship in the state normal, struggled with the intricacies of the new steps and blushed and blushed as she felt the eyes of the class upon her.

"One, two, three; one, two, three," counted the teacher again. The music played a lilting measure, and the pupils swung across the floor in the mazes of a folk dance.

Most of them did it well, but Mary and the awkward young man hopped up and down, this way and that, and came together at last out of step, out of time, out of everything—breathless, discouraged, disheveled.

"It's dreadful!" Mary gasped.

"You are doing it nicely," the panting young man encouraged her.

"Oh, I'm not!" The words came with a sob. "I dance like—like a hippopotamus."

"You couldn't." His eyes rested with appreciation on the delicate flushed face, the loosened yellow hair. "You're too—too—little—and—graceful." He stammered over the words, as if compliments did not come easily.

"I'm not graceful," she said. "Look at that lovely creature at the head of the line."

Seeing their eyes upon her, Margaret Morton nodded to them, smiling. She was feeling very complacent. Her natty gymnasium suit was of black satin, and her hair shone like copper in the strong light. She pitied that little girl at the foot of the line in the blue flannel suit. But the young man seemed worth knowing. He had a classic profile and wore his clothes properly.

AN OPPORTUNITY FOR AN INTERCHANGE OF ASPIRATIONS.

Margaret danced across the polished floor.

"Isn't it fine?" she asked as she came up to them.

"You do it so beautifully," Mary murmured.

The Awkward Young Man did not say anything, and Margaret, moved to coquetry, took three expert steps to the right and then three expert steps to the left. "It's so easy," she declared, with some display of silk stockinged ankles.

"It looks easy when you do it," Mary sighed, "but I am so stupid."

But Margaret held out her hands to the Awkward Young Man. "Let me show you," she offered. "Now," and they danced away together.

For the next fifteen minutes Margaret held the Awkward Young Man at her side, and Mary, practicing forlornly by herself in the corner, watched them and envied the ease with which Margaret talked and laughed and pirouetted in a shine of black satin and of copper colored hair.

When the music started, the Awkward Young Man came back to Mary.

"How are you getting along?" he asked, with a smile that lighted his face and made it very attractive.

"I shall never learn," Mary said, "never," and her lip quivered.

"Oh, yes, you will," he said. "I don't believe you are the kind to give up."

"But—Miss Morton does it so beautifully," Mary told him tremulously.

"This is Miss Morton's third year of training in the physical course at the summer school," he reminded her. "She ought to do it beautifully."

And then they struggled on as the teacher counted, interminably:

"One, two, three; one, two, three."

Every day Mary and the Awkward Young Man had a few minutes together. But the minutes were few, for Margaret Morton had taken upon herself the instruction of the Awkward Young Man, and more than once Mary was left to do the steps in her lonely corner.

I don't know how but me," she said despairingly, in the third week, to the Awkward Young Man.

"I don't," he assured her.

"But Miss Morton takes such an interest in you."

"I wish she wouldn't," he said moodily.

A light leaped into Mary's eyes.

"I would rather be with you," he added, with a look that changed the world for little Mary.

"One, two, three; one, two, three," counted the teacher, and Mary flew around the room on feet that seemed winged.

"How well you did that!" said the Awkward Young Man as she danced up to him, her cheeks red, eyes like stars, her little figure swaying to the rhythm.

"I don't know how it happened," she laughed. "Oh, let's do it together."

Margaret Morton watched them from the other end of the room, and when, in the intricate windings of the folk dance, she passed the Awkward Young Man she whispered, "Don't you want to go with me to the lighthouse in the morning?"

"I'm sorry," he fibbed, "but I have other plans."

And when he passed Mary he asked: "Will you let me take you to the beach after the class tomorrow? We can carry our notebooks and study."

"Oh, it will be lovely," she said, and all the happiness in her heart seemed expressed in her tripping feet, so that the teacher patted her on the shoulder as she came up at the end of the lesson. "You are getting on, Miss Cobb," she said.

The day at the beach, with the waves lapping the sands lazily and the gulls dipping and rising against a sky of sapphire, gave an opportunity for an interchange of aspirations and ideals. Mary told of her plans to teach in the normal, and the Awkward Young Man confessed to an ambition to instruct physically the youths of the Y. M. C. A. of his town.

As the afternoon waned they talked, as young people will, of other things. The Awkward Young Man contended that it is not good for man to live alone, and Mary admitted tremulously that ambition does not fill a woman's life.

But it was not until the next day that the final word was said.

"One, two, three; one, two, three," counted the teacher, and Mary and the Awkward Young Man wound in and out and in and out and came carefully and correctly through the first difficult figure.

"How well we did that!" Mary said as they stopped at the other end of the room.

Her hands were still in his. He drew her slightly toward him. "If we might be together always," he whispered.

Margaret Morton was watching them as she stood alone at the other side of the room.

"Let me go," Mary protested, blushing beautifully, but leaving her hands in his.

"I shall never let you go," he declared, with a smile of triumph, as the music began again, and he swung her with him into the last inspiring figure of the folk dance.

Success Out of Failure.

"When you are abroad," said a journalist, "you will find in your English newspaper that every telegraphic report is credited to Reuter's agency. Reuter supplies all the telegraphic news over there, as the Associated Press supplies it over here.

"Now, listen to this story.

"Werner von Siemens, a German electrical engineer, was commissioned in 1850 to lay the first telegraph line between Verviers and Cologne. While he was laying this cable a pretty woman came to him and besought him to desist. The telegraph, she said, with tears in her fine eyes, would ruin her husband's business and reduce him to penury. His business was the conduct of a huge and successful pigeon post between Brussels and Aix-la-Chapelle.

"Siemens advised the young woman's husband to convert his pigeons into pie and to go to London and start a news agency there. He would give him, he said, valuable introductions.

"The man went to London and started a news agency. His name was Reuter. In a few short years, so successful was his new line of work, he had become a baron and a millionaire.

"So, when you see Reuter's name a dozen times in every English newspaper, think of his ruined pigeon post and take to heart the lesson that new inventions do not harm, but help, those who have intelligence, industry and a pretty wife."—Duluth Herald.

Death Touched Debtors.

Of course the man didn't look at it that way, but his bereavement was really a source of financial gain. It was a son who died, a boy of thirteen. He was killed in a street accident. The fatality touched the public heart strangely. He had been a popular boy, and his death aroused the sympathy of the neighbors for blocks around. The father was a small tradesman, who went on the principle that all mankind was honest. He trusted right and left. He had become creditor to two-thirds of the people in the neighborhood. Many of those debtors were sharks who, either because of financial disability or naturally dishonest propensities, probably had no intention of ever paying up, but with the news of the lad's death all experienced a change of heart. When the shop reopened after the funeral, the dazed proprietor entertained a stream of callers.

"I am so sorry," they said, one and all. Then they added, half sheepishly, "I owe you so and so," and planked down the money.

In some cases the shopkeeper got money that had been due more than a year, and he piled up dollars in cash that, only for the sympathy called forth by his bereavement, would have been a dead loss.—New York Press.

About Eyeglasses.

Unfortunately there comes a day in each one's life when the eyes require outside assistance to accomplish their usual results. Many are obliged by slight defects of vision to adopt glasses quite young, even as children, and it is fortunate that science has made such progress in this branch, for there is nothing sadder to see than a blind person. Accidental loss of sight cannot be overcome, but slight defects may now, thanks to the oculist, be generally remedied. The wearing of glasses is a trial from the first to last, although the fitting of the nose glass is reduced to a fine art. Spectacles are the only comfortable and satisfactory sort to wear.

It is better to wear nose glasses without a chain, even at the risk of breaking them, for the chain drags the glasses to one side and frequently weakens the springs. The chain, too, twists itself into intricate kinks at inconvenient times and causes a word or two of mild profanity on the part of the wearer. If something must be worn, a cord is better.—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Failing Memory.

The memory is the most easily fatigued of all our mental faculties. This would seem almost to follow from the very nature of this faculty. To recall an impression already stored up in the brain necessarily involves effort. Every student knows that after a few hours' work the memory loses its power and further effort becomes unprofitable. It is consistent with this view that the memory is the faculty which first decays with the advance of age. With many persons this enfeeblement sets in before middle life is past. Events known to us in youth, when memory was fresh and strong, can be recalled in old age, while the things that happened yesterday readily slip into oblivion.

Former Residents Visiting old Scenes

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ulmer Tibbens and two sons, Frederic and Louis, of Wheeling, W. Va. arrived in Altoona Saturday night on a fortnight's vacation with Mrs. Tibben's mother, Mrs. M. J. Rhoades, 900 Twenty-third avenue. They expect to spend a few days in Huntingdon county and also go to Bellefonte for a short visit, that being being Mr. Tibben's birthplace. Altoona folks will remember Mr. Tibbens as a former newspaper man, having been connected with the morning Tribune and the Mirror among the dailies. For something over three years he has been a resident of Wheeling and is the advertising manager for Stone and Thomas, West Virginia's largest department store. He is an enthusiastic base ball fan and will "look over" the "Bergs" while here and compare them with Teddy Prices Peerless Pursuers representing Wheeling in the Central league—Altoona Tribune.

Sign for Rothert Building

The attractive electric sign that in a few days will sparkle from the top of the new Rothert building is being put in readiness by the Edison Electric Illumination company's business department of this city, under the personal direction of Business Superintendent Houston. The sign will be one of the largest electric advertising mediums in the state and its various colored effects can be seen at a great distance. The dimensions of the sign will be eighteen feet high and fifty feet in length and it will be composed of 1,000 four candle power lights. The eighteen inch border will be red and green lights and the name, "Rothert" will be designed in white.

A Sustaining Diet

These are the enervating days, when, as somebody has said, men drop by the sunstroke as if the Day of Fire had dawned. They are fraught with danger to people whose systems are poorly sustained; and this leads us to say, in the interest of the less robust of our readers, that the full effect of Hood's Sarsaparilla is such as to suggest the propriety of calling this medicine something besides a blood purifier and tonic,—say, a sustaining diet. It makes it much easier to bear the heat, assures refreshing sleep and will without any doubt avert much sickness at this time of year.

Buck Briggs' Slowness.

By LULU JOHNSTON.

Copyrighted, 1907, by M. M. Cunningham.

Sally loitered along looking into the shop windows. All the hot day she had bent over the clacking machine until eyes and back and head alike ached from the noise and strain. The other girls had hurried from the shop when the gong had struck. Some of them had engagements for trolley rides for the evening, and were in a hurry to be dressed and off. Others made haste to reach home for supper. Sally had neither of these reasons for haste. Her thin, white face did not attract the few men she knew. They never invited her anywhere, and the streets were at least cooler than the stuffy little room that she called home.

She knew that presently she must make her coffee and fry her single chop over the tiny oil stove that filled the room with the reeking odor of oil, but by walking slowly she delayed that time as long as possible.

She gave a little gasp as she came before the installment bazaar windows. Instead of the rolls of wall paper and carpets, the "nobby" parlor sets and iron bedsteads, the four big windows of the store were got up to represent the four rooms of a flat, a card in each window stating the cost of the equipment to be $10 down and $5 a month for an unspecified time.

Sally passed from the plush elegance of the parlor to the simplicity of the bedroom and the cozy dining room with a real sideboard, but it was against the glass inclosing the kitchen that she flattened her pudgy nose the longest.

The domestic instinct was strong within her, and this array of gleaming pots and pans, the glitter of the cheap china and the plated knives and forks fascinated her. If she only had a kitchen like that, instead of the one burner oil stove on the soap box at the foot of her narrow cot! She drew her breath sharply and exhaled it in a long sigh.

"Nice, ain't it?" Sally looked up in alarm, but there was nothing in the appearance of the man at her side to cause alarm. His twinkling eyes were frank and honest, and not a line of his ruddy, freckled face was sinister. That he was no "masher" could be seen at a glance, and Sally smiled an assent to his question.

"I bet a girl who knew how to cook could get fine dinners in a kitchen like that," he said, a shade of wistfulness in his hearty voice. "If I knew one, by jinks, I'd buy that."

"Huh!" Sally's voice was scornful. She could understand why none of the men at the shop asked her out to trolley rides and things, but for this great, strong fellow to admit his inability to find a sweetheart was absurd.

"It ain't so easy," declared the other hotly. "I ain't much with girls. The like fellows better what can dance and say fool things. I ain't never learned either."

"Then you ought to begin now," sniffed Sally as she moved away. The man made as though he would follow, but the broad shoulders bunched together despondently, and he returned to his inspection of the kitchen.

But now he could also see the mistress of the apartment, a slender wisp of a girl, the sort of woman a man wants to take in his arms and cuddle. To him Sally's wan face was beautiful, her thinness elegance. Buck Briggs had met his fate.

The next evening Sally, coming slowly down the street, found him in front of the window again and passed on with only the faintest glance of longing at the shining kitchen. If he had any idea that she remembered him he should see that he was mistaken. Buck looked disappointed, but he followed on to the dreary pile that Sally called her home.

She did not see him as, with lagging feet, she ascended the high stoop and climbed the five flights that led to her attic room, but Buck crossed quickly to the opposite side of the street and rang the bell, for his eyes had caught the sign announcing that furnished rooms were to be had, and that night he slept under the same roof.

He was on the steps the following night when Sally came along, pretending a tremendous interest in the scene before him. He nodded as the girl came up the steps and pulled off his cloth cap.

"Say, d'you want to ride out to the park after you eat your supper?" he asked bashfully. "I'm livin' here now," he added, as though that constituted a proper introduction.

For a moment Sally hesitated with the feminine instinct to be hardly won, but the afternoon had been excessively hot, and twice she had dropped over the machine. The foreman had been kept busy with smelling salts and water, for the girls had suffered terribly.

With an easy gesture Buck thrust his hand in his pocket and rattled three nickels and a dime against the quarter and half dollar, but it was not this so much as the thought of her room that decided Sally. With a nod and "I'll be down soon," she hurried up the steep flights.

She munched the bread and smoked sausage she had brought home with her while she hurried about her dressing. There was a clean waist she was saving for Sunday and a broad crimson ribbon that brought a touch of color to her face. The rest of the transformation was worked in her face through the thought that she was to have an escort.

Buck blinked as she came through the grim doorway. His startled "You are all right, sis," was uncouth enough, but it was the first compliment Sally had ever received, and she smiled radiantly upon her cavalier.

The ride to the park was a trip to fairyland after the clatter of the machinery and the heat of the operating room. Buck beamed when she declined his offer to find a partner for her to dance with, and they sat listening to the music and watching the dancers while Sally sipped her lemon soda and Buck his beer. Twice he treated her to ice cream when some of the other girls were near, and, under the warming influence of his admiration, Sally's wan face became transformed, and even one of the shipping clerks stopped to speak a few words to her.

Regretfully she turned away when Buck finally suggested that it was time to go and that they knew how to get there again. She could have stayed there until the lights were put out, but Buck was not minded to let her lose too much sleep, and they caught a car before the crowd was ready to start back to the city.

He gave a signal to the conductor before they reached their corner, and Sally followed him protestingly from the car.

"I know we ain't home yet," he admitted, "but I want to show you somethin.'"

He took her arm through his and led her to the windows of the Installment Bazaar company.

"Pretty, ain't it?" he asked, in unconscious repetition of their first meeting. "Say, I know a flat that furniture will just fit. I get eighteen per, and I get it every week. If you're scary, here's the firm I work for. They'll tell you I'm sober and all right. What do you say, little girl? Can't you see yourself in that kitchen gettin' supper ready for me 'long about 6 o'clock?"

"Me?" Sally's voice was awed. "Why, Buck, you ain't known me more'n three days."

"That's enough," he declared. "I know you enough to know you're the girl I want. You said the other night I was slow. I ain't so slow when the right girl comes along. Will you make it a go, dearest? Honest, I love you."

Sally's starved little heart swelled with emotion. Her colorless life had suddenly grown rosy. These two castaways of the city had found each other, and love had followed quickly.

"You ain't slow for a cent," she conceded admiringly. "Say, Buck, that kitchen's most as lovely as the park."

"Then it's 'yes?'" he demanded as his breath came quickly.

"Stupid," said Sally, but it sounded like a caress, and Buck understood.

Two True Snake Stories.

Attempting to kill a seven foot blacksnake yesterday, Samuel Laros a farmer of East Macungie, near Allentown, struck the reptile with a heavy stick. The snake, however, coiled about his leg, throwing him to the ground and breaking his right arm. The reptile was finally killed.

When Miss Sadie Heckert started to clean the parlor of her home in Dallastown, near York yesterday, a large snake darted out from under a chair and started toward her. Frightened by the appearance of the reptile, Miss Heckert sounded an alarm. Several neighbors rushed in with clubs and killed the reptile.

Deafness Cannot be Cured.

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

The Typhoid Season.

The Typhoid season is here, and there is already a number of cases reported in many parts of the commonwealth. Every precaution against the disease should be taken. Persons aware of the danger that lurks in impure water can adopt protective measures at home, but are dependant on the tender mercies of hotel and restaurant managers when they patronize these establishments. Health authorities in several states are pointing out, through the press, the necessity of special precautions in the summer time for those who go away from home. Cities are not the only centres for the propagation of typhoid. The water supply in the country is often dangerously polluted, nor the fact that the fluid is clear and sparkling always a guarantee its purity. The moss covered bucket that hangs in the well, is a favorite hiding place for the deadly germs. "Boil the water" is a slogan that should be sounded often in the country as well as in crowded centres of population. Water and milk are the chief vehicles for the spread of "the preventable diseases." Summer tourists should exercise special vigilance during the season when typhoid is rampant. Fortunately Bellefonte is blessed with as pure spring water as is supplied any city in the state, and every precaution has been taken in the past and will continue to be taken that it is not contaminated.

"23" Widows In Three Blocks.

Monday's Danville News says: Yesterday afternoon as the News reporter was walking down the street an observing citizen stopped the gleaner of happenings and imparted to him the blocks, on Lower Mulberry street, between Mill and Church, there reside just 23 widows; and on that section of the street there are but 35 homes—23 information that he had just run across a most extraordinary state of affairs that existed on a certain street in Danville.

"You wouldn't believe it," said the observing citizen, "but within three blocks there are 23 widows in 35 homes—I couldn't believe it either, so I went up there and counted them for myself, and I've just returned from the trip. I found 23."

him appointed Postmaster of Bellefonte from 1865 to 1869, without the solicitation of Mr. Montgomery himself.

On February 12, 1899 he was again appointed Postmaster of Bellefonte, serving until Feb. 12 1903, when he was re-appointed for another four years serving until February 12, 1907. He made a splendid official, kind and accommodating, he filled the office with satisfaction and credit.

Early in life he was married to Mary Catherine Lingle, daughter of J. J. Lingle an attorney and former sheriff of the county. Their married life proved a pleasant and happy one. Mrs. Montgomery survives with the following children: Mrs. C. J. McHugh, of Pittsburg; Mrs. John C. Bair Joseph L., Fred and Emma Montgomery, all of Bellefonte. He also leaves two brothers, Henry H. and Frank C., of Bellefonte.

The deceased was an earnest and faithful member of St. John's Episcopal church and greatly interested in its welfare. For almost 50 years he was secretary of the Vestry of this church. Being a life long resident of the town he could recall its early history and people and many interesting stories could be told by him. He was a member of the old original Bellefonte band and his death leaves F. Potts Green as its only living member. He was an ardent Republican and wholesouled genial gentleman whose death will be sincerely mourned by his family and friends.

The funeral services over the remains of the late W. W. Montgomery were held on Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock from the family home on Allegheny street and were largely attended.

The services were conducted by Rev. Norman Stockett of Coudersport, who is filling the Episcopal pulpit in the absence of Rev. Richardson. He was assisted by Rev. George Israel Brown, former pastor of the church at this place. The floral tributes were unusually profuse and beautiful. The casket bearers were all relatives of the deceased, namely, Hasle Montgomery, J. Howard Lingle, Harold Lingle, W. C. Lingle, Raymond Lingle, John Bullock, Frank Lingle and James Curtin. The vestrymen of the Episcopal church acted as honorary pall-bearers. They are as follows: Col. W. Fred Reynolds, W. S. Zeller, Dr. George Z. Harris, Dr. J. L. Seibert and E. H. Richard.

Interment was made in the Union cemetery.

MRS. LOUISA BRACHBILL.

On Sunday evening Mrs. Louisa Brachbill, one of the oldest residents of our town, passed peacefully away at her home on North Spring street, just as the clocks were striking the hour of eight. Her death was the result of a sad accident which occurred on Tuesday evening of last week. It seems that while in her sleep she got up out of bed and walked out on the front porch roof and fell to the pavement, a distance of about twenty feet sustaining serious injuries which together with her advanced age caused her death. She suffered extremely at first but gradually grew weaker until she peacefully passed away.

The deceased whose maiden name was Louisa Runkle was the daughter of John Runkle and was born in Centre Hill, Centre county, June 6th 1819, making her age at time of death 88 years, 1 month and 15 days. In 1841 she was united in marriage to John Brachbill and the same year came to Bellefonte where she has resided ever since. Her husband engaged in the furniture business and became one of the leading business men of the town. He departed this life several years ago.

She was a lovely woman and was a faithful and enthusiastic member of the Presbyterian church of Bellefonte.

She leaves one son W. R. Brachbill, who with his family made their home with her. She also leaves one brother; James Runkle, of Tussayville.

She proved a mother to her motherless grandchildren, Charles and Louisa Brachbill, and also raised her grandson, John E. Fryberger, now cashier of the First National Bank, of Philipsburg. She was a kind neighbor, faithful wife and mother and her death is sincerely mourned not only by her family but by a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

The funeral of Mrs. Louisa Brachbill took place Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock from her late residence on South Spring street. It was attended by a large number of the friends and relatives of the deceased, there being many beautiful floral tributes.

The services were conducted by Rev. J. Allison Platts, assisted by Dr. William Laurie.

The casket bearers were Messrs. C. C. Shuey, J. C. Meyer, W. B. Rankin, Thomas Donachy, P. L. Beezer, J. C. Harper, J. D. Sourbeck and Dr. Joseph Brockerhoff. Interment was made in the Union cemetery.

Goldsmith's Generosity.

A beggar once asked alms of Oliver Goldsmith as he walked with a friend up Fleet street, and he gave her a shilling. His companion, knowing something of the woman, censured the writer for his excess of humanity, saying that the shilling was misapplied, as she would spend it for liquor. "If it makes her happy in any way, my end is answered," replied Goldsmith.

Another proof that the doctor's generosity was not always regulated by discretion was at a time when, after much delay, a day was fixed to pay the £40 due his tailor. Goldsmith procured the money, but a friend calling upon him and relating a piteous tale of his goods being seized for rent, the thoughtless but benevolent author gave him all the money. The tailor called and was told that if he had come a little sooner he could have had the money, but that he had just parted with every shilling of it to a friend in distress, adding, "I would have been an unfeeling monster not to have relieved trouble when in my power."

Heart Protectors.

Many persons are puzzled to know why policemen wear their badges so low on their coats instead of on the flap made for that purpose. As a matter of fact the badge or star, as he calls it, of many a policeman is right next to his heart. Some of the bluecoats can thank their "stars" for being alive. This little metal shield has deflected the bullet of burglar or highwayman, and at times, too, has stopped the knife thrust of would be assassins. During the last twenty or thirty years there are many cases on record showing that the little badge has been a life saver. Even bullets fired at close range, as a rule, cannot penetrate the shield. That's why a bluecoat always feels safer in keeping the star at a vital spot. When off duty some policemen wear their stars on their vests, but always directly over the heart. They are so accustomed to the little protector that they feel uneasy without it.—Philadelphia Record.

Scott's Wise Dog.

So veracious a man as Sir Walter Scott had a wise dog, a bull terrier. Said the novelist once: "I taught him to understand a great many words, inasmuch that I am positive that the communication betwixt the canine species and ourselves might be greatly enlarged. Camp once bit the baker, who was bringing bread to the family. I beat him and explained the enormity of his offense, after which, to the last moments of his life, he never heard the least allusion to the story in whatever tone of voice it was mentioned without getting up and retiring to the darkest corner of the room, with great appearance of distress. Then if you said 'the baker was well paid' or 'the baker was not hurt, after all,' Camp came forth from his hiding place, capered and barked and rejoiced."

The Wealthy Angler's Tackle Outfit.

The wealthy angler who wants the best of everything has a special six foot oblong case or trunk for his fishing rods, which, being the best, cost about $30 each. He has a heavy surf casting rod, a lighter bay casting rod and a set of fly rods for fresh water fishing. His reels, of which he must have various types, cost $75 each and upward. For his fishing tackle there is a special trunk, in which are the best Irish linen lines, hooks and flies of all descriptions, sinkers, swivels, squids, spoons, spinners, floats, artificial bait, etc. Such fishermen generally carry duplicate tackle and several duplicates of pole tips and such things as may be most likely to break. The total cost of a wealthy angler's tackle outfit ranges from $250 to $1,000.—New York Tribune.

Irascible Carlyle.

A lady who lived near Thomas Carlyle kept Cochin China fowls, and their crowing was such a nuisance that the philosopher sent a complaint to her. The owner was indignant upon hearing the appeal.

"Why," said she, "they crow only four times a day, and how can Mr. Carlyle be seriously annoyed at that?"

Upon hearing of her attitude upon the subject Carlyle replied, "The lady forgets the pain I suffer in waiting for those four crows."

Once Too Often.

"What's all this excitement about?"

"Nothing worth mentioning. Man got knocked down."

"Accident?"

"Not exactly. One of these men who always catch hold of you and push you out of their way when you happen to meet them at a crowded corner grabbed the wrong man just now. That's all."—Chicago Tribune.

Saving Time.

Father (to his son, early in the morning)—What is the meaning of this? You are lying in bed with your clothes on. Son (a student)—Yes, father. I do that so that if I oversleep myself I shall not be late at college.—Meggendorfer Blatter.

Torture.

A shrewd old doctor once said: "If I wanted to torture an enemy, I would tell him he had an incurable disease. His life would be miserable, and he would be almost certain to die before his time."

Missed Vocation.

Client—Didn't you make a mistake in going into law instead of the army? Lawyer—Why? Client—By the way you charge there would be little left of the enemy.—London Tit-Bits.

Rash presumption is a ladder which will break the mounter's neck.—German Proverb.

Limited Command.

John Puryear of Richmond was one of Mosby's men in the eventful days when the woods and hills of northern Virginia made the picturesque background for some of the hottest encounters of the civil war. Puryear was a mere stripling when the war began and put on his first long trousers as a wearer of the Confederate gray. Nevertheless, he fought like a veteran. He lacked a veteran's balance, for, although fearless, he had not the slightest judgment, a fact which, says Mr. Munson, the author of "Mosby's Men," Mosby once recognized with considerable humor. All that Puryear knew about war was what he gathered in each mad rush through the ranks of the enemy, with his long black hair flying in the wind and his revolver hot with action. He rode like a centaur, and no enemy ever existed that he would not engage, hand to hand, hip and thigh. After one of the most daring rushes Mosby said to him:

"Puryear, I am going to make you a lieutenant for gallantry."

Puryear swept his plumed hat in a bow that was royal in its grace.

"But," continued Colonel Mosby, "I don't want you ever to command any of my men!"

Shark Worship In Hawaii.

The shark has been perhaps the most universally worshiped of all the Hawaiian animal gods. Strange as it may seem, the islanders formerly regarded the shark as being the friend and protector of all those who pay him devout attention. Each locality along the coast of the main islands of the Hawaiian group formerly had its patron shark, whose name, place of abode, history, etc., were all well known to his superstitious worshipers. The biggest and most celebrated of these shark divinities was a male, whose mouth was so large that he could easily swallow any other shark known to frequent those waters. According to the Hawaiian folklore stories, the bulk of this "god of the sea" was so great that he could not pass through the narrowest channels which separate the different islands, but spent his time swimming around the whole group and looking after the welfare of the people.

The Pelican and Its Pouch.

Among the curiosities of nature must be reckoned the pouch of the pelican, which serves equally well as a net with which to scoop up fish and as a bag to convey food to its young. When not in use the bird can contract its pouch so that it is barely discernible, but when it is fully distended it will hold two gallons of water. When the pelican is hunting for food it flies slowly about twenty feet above the surface of the water, scanning its depths for any sign of its prey. As soon as a fish is seen there is a sudden folding of a pair of wings, a downward plunge with the speed of an arrow head first into the sea, the unerring marksman reappearing in a moment and floating on the waves long enough to reveal a glimpse of a fish gliding down its capacious gullet and to shake the water from its disheveled plumage.

How He Got a Drink.

An Indiana traveling man told a story the other day of an incident on the road. He was in the smoking car of an express train reading his paper when a man rushed in from the car behind the smoker, evidently in great agitation and said: "Has anybody in this car any whisky? A woman in the car behind has fainted!" Instantly dozens of flasks were produced. The man who had asked for it picked out the largest one, drew the cork and put the bottle to his lips. With a long, satisfied sigh, he handed the flask back and remarked, "That did me a lot of good, and I needed it, for it always makes me feel queer to see a woman faint away!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Bat.

Nearly all bats have the faculty of hibernating. Their hibernation, however, is not perfect—that is to say, that when the warm days occur in the middle of winter they wake up, together with the insects which are their food. Still theirs is a true hibernation trance, differing from sleep, with very low rate of pulse, heart action and respiration. Probably they would endure immersion in water for an hour or two without drowning, as other hibernators have been found to do.

Just the Other Way.

"I am delighted," said the old friend who had called, "to find that you agree with your husband in everything, Mrs. Henpeck."

"Indeed!" answered that estimable lady. "If you will take the pains to investigate our domestic relations, sir, you will find that it is Mr. Henpeck who agrees with me in everything."

His Size.

"Sam, what would you do if you had a million dollars?"

"Fo' de Lawd's sake! I'm sho' I dunno wot I'd do ef I had a million dollahs, but I know wot I'd do ef I had $2. I've bin waitin' two yeahs ter git married."—Judge.

Preference.

The Court—Six years at hard labor. You'll get a chance to learn a trade, my man. Burglar—Judge, couldn't I be permitted to learn it—er—by correspondence course?—Puck.

For the burdens which God lays on us there will always be grace enough. The burdens which we make for ourselves we must carry alone.—A. W. Thorold, D. D.

THE COMING OF RUTH.

Crowded House Greets Home Talent Show—It was a Grand Success.

In spite of the sultry weather Garman's Opera House was crowded to the doors Thursday evening to witness the performance by home talent of the beautiful dramatic cantata, "The Coming of Ruth." For weeks past the people have been anxiously looking forward to this event and last night they were permitted to witness one of the prettiest and best musical home talent shows ever given in Bellefonte.

The cantata is founded on bible scenes and not only entertaining but teaches a beautiful lesson. It has six scenes and during its program there are 51 solos, duetts and choruses. The costumes and scenic affects are very fine and the stage settings simply grand.

The title character of "Ruth" was taken by Miss Sallie Fitzgerald, one of Bellefonte's sweetest singers. This was a very difficult characters and was splendidly handled by Miss Fitzgerald. Especially beautiful was the duett rendered by Miss Fitzgerald as Ruth and Mr. A. C. Harper in the character of "Mahlon, son of Elimelech."

Naomi, wife of Elimelech, was taken by Mrs. A. C. Farish, whose acting and and singing showed dramatic training, accompanied by a cultivated, beautiful voice.

Orpha, a Moabitess, was taken by Miss Mary Brown who with Chilion. (Mr. W. F. Dunning) sang a very pretty duet, which drew forth the hearty applause of the hearers.

Miss Helen Bible of Philadelphia, took the difficult part of "Tamar, a Seer," and handled it in a splendid manner. She has a very beautiful voice under perfect cultivation, and in addition, her acting was perfect, showing the excellent training of her father, Dr. George P. Bible, the well known teacher of elocution.

Miss Lillian Walker, who has made quite a locals reputation as a singer added to her laurel Thursday evening by her capable singing of the part of Deborah, a Prophetess of Israel." She has a beautiful voice and her singing was highly appreciated.

Elimelech of Bethlehem was taken by Mr. John Bullock, who needs no introduction to a Bellefonte audience, and he sang with his usual ability.

Clarence Garbrick as Barack, sang well and showed himself possessed of splendid voice which he is fully capable of handling.

Miss Margaret McFarland as Leah and Miss DeSales Walsh, as Miriam also performed their parts in a very satisfactory manner.

There was not a hitch in the performance from start to finish. The chorus was trained perfectly under the direction of Prof. W. T. Nose, who is certainly to be congratulated on the success of his entertainment.

The entire cast and choruses including Miss Marie Walsh, as accompanist worked hard to make the affiair a success and they all deserve hearty praise and congratulations for the success achieved.

The entertainment will be repeated in the Petrikin Hall this evening. In addition to the cantata there will be moving pictures and illustrated songs before the cantata begins. These are being put on free of charge by the gentlemen who are starting a theatorium the Petrikin Hall.

After the performance tonight a reception and banquet will be tendered the performers in the gymnasium at the Y. M. C. A.

BIG PICNIC AUGUST 20th.

Business Men of Centre county and Clinton county to Meet at Hecla Park.

A meeting of the general committee of the Business Men's Picnic association of Centre and Clinton counties was held Tuesday afternoon of this week at the club house of the Nittany County club at Hecla Park and there was a large attendance of the members of the associa ion. On account of the excessive heat the mee ing was called to order on the spacious porch surrounding the club house.

The meeting was called to order by A. C. Mingle, president of the association, followed by the reading of the minutes by the secretary, J. C. Meyer.

The president announced that an election would be held to fill the vacancies in the association. The name of Joel A. Herr of Cedar Springs was mentioned to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Charles J. Sigmund and that gentleman was efected.

Mayor W. H. Stevenson of this city was also elected a member in Lock Haven C. S. Suiter, who is permantly located in the city of Pittsburg, and Gross Mingle of Bellefonte was substituted for Frank Crawford, who also has moved from this section.

Mr. Sechler of Bellefonte then offered a resolution that any member who absents himself from the meetings of the association for two consective years such members be dropped. The resolution was adapted. Secretary Meyer stated that there were at present 46 members of the association, but some attended no meetings at all. He also stated that Clinton county did not have an equal number of representatives, whereupon Mr. Sechler offered a resolution that each county be limited to 20 members, which was unaminiously adopted. The names of the several who were not regular attendants were dropped and the names were John R. Thompson of Salona and D. I. McNaul of the Democrat and U. A. Xander of the express, Lock Haven, were nominated and elected acclamation.

The election of officers for the next year followed. Mr. Kift stated that in view of the fact that the present officers had performed their duties well and had worked earnestly for the success of the annual picnic that they be re-elected for another year, which was done.

Just then Frank Warfield, general agent of the Central railroad remarked that it was about time for supper and the guests were ushered into the large dining room of the club house, where a splendid supper, consisting of crab patties, roast beef, potatoes, peas, cucumbers, imported cheese, coffee, strawberries etc. was waiting. All ate freely then waided into business.

The president stated that a time and place be selected for holding the next picnic, whereupon Mr. Merrill of this city made a motion to hold it at Hecla Park. Some little discussion resulted as it was thought by a few that the annual outing might be held in Clinton county this year. After it was brought out that from $600 to $800 must be guaranteed for expenses and that no one of the Lock Haven Delegation cared to assume the responsibility and for various other reasons, the motion of Mr. Merrill prevailed unanimously.

The time for holding the picnic was next discussed. Many thought that a Thursday would be the best day of the week, but Mr. Warfield stated that it was impossible to get sufficient extra cars from other railroads on that day and suggested that it be held on any other day of the week day.

After considerable discussion it was decided to hold the picnic on Tuesday August 20.

The president and secretary were instructed to arrange for the various committee at their convenience and report at the next meeting, two weeks hence, also to set the time and place to receive the reports of the association. It was agreed to again convene on Tuesday, July 30, at the club house.

Mr. Kift moved that a vote or thanks be extended the members of the Nittany County club for use of the club house and to Frank Warfield for hospitality extended. The members present voted unanimously in favor of these motions.

The meeting throughout was one of harmony and transacted in a brief period.

The following members were present at the meeting: A. C. Mingle, president, Bellefonte; T. J. Smull, vice president, Mackeyville; G. W. Fredericks, treasurer, Lock Haven; J. C. Meyer, secretary, Bellefonte; G. W. Mason, C. F. Brown, P. F. Rittman, Philip S. Kift, C. H. Bressler, David G. Stoner, A. L. Merrill, Frank E. Harder, A. C. Condo, D. I. McNaul, U. A. Xander, Lock Haven; John I. Olewine, J. Will Conley, J. D. Sourbeck, D. G. Stuart, S. Keichline, H. Sechler, H. Otto, Robert Cole, C. F. Montgomery, John M. Bullock, H. P. Harris, Frank Warfield, Bellefonte Philip D. Foster, State College; R. H. Stuart, Island; M. D. Kelley; Snow Shoe.

To put the brake on the wagon going down the hill is a help to the horse, when the wagon is heavily loaded. But what driver would think of applying the brake to a loaded wagon going up hill? If he did, his sensible horses would probably balk. Many a man is in the condition of pulling a load up hill with the brake set against him. When his stomach is out of order, and the allied organs of digestion and nutrition impaired in their functions a friction is set up which has to be overcome in addition to the performance of daily duties. A foul stomach makes a foggy brain, and the man with a disordered stomach has often to grope his way through the day's business like a man in a fog. He forgets appointments. Problems seem presented to his mind "wrong end to." This condition is entirely remedied by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It puts the stomach and digestive and nutritive system into a condition of perfect health, and gives a clear brain, a steady hand and a light step for the day's duties. Dr. Pierce's medicines do not contain alcohol or other injurious ingredients; they are not "patent medicine" because their ingredients are printed on the label of each bottle.

A Mystery of Indo-China.

The great mystery about Indo-China and one which must ever be insoluble is the story of the lost race and the vanished civilization of that strange country. The mighty walls of Angkor-Wat, rising in the midst of sparsely settled jungles, remain as the memorial of a great empire which has utterly disappeared and is altogether lost to history. No one will ever know who planned this gigantic temple or what tyrant hounded on his myriads of people to build up those immense blocks of stone and cover them with the most elaborate of sculptures. Angkor-Wat was one of the most astonishing monuments in the world, and this forgotten temple was built so as to endure as long as the earth itself were it not for the irresistibly destructive effect of plant life on the strongest walls that man can raise. Only a highly civilized and very wealthy people could have erected Angkor-Wat, a very different race from the Anamite of modern days. The whole nation has disappeared as utterly as the busy myriads who once populated the wastes and solitudes of Memphis.—Singapore Free Press.

JAKE JACKSON IN TROUBLE.

Some Serious charges Made against State College Man.

The hearing of Jacob Jackson, charged with ill treating his wife and family, was held before Justice C. E. Shuey in Fireman's hall, Tuesday morning at 11:40. Mrs. Jackson was represented by her attorney J. K. Johnson of Bellefonte, while Jackson conducted or rather attempted to, his own case. The affidavit made by Mrs. Jackson charged her husband with striking and choking her abusing her children, threatening arson, habitual drunkenness, menace to the community, obtaining goods under false pretence and forging her name to orders and being of unsound mind.

The first witness called was Mrs. Belle Jackson, who being sworn, testified that she was the lawful wife of Jacob Jackson the accused and mother of his five children, the eldest of whom is 16 and the youngest 6. Jackson had abused her time and time again but only when under the influence of liquor. On the 13th he had choked her, attempted to destroy the furniture and had acted in such a threating manner that she was afraid of her life and vacated her premises and sought shelter at the home of John Krumrine. Late on Saturday night her husband called at the place and demanded that his wife go home with him. Upon her refusal to accede to his demands he used a vile epithet and forbade her to ever darken his doors again. She also testified that he had secured goods upon forged notes, from local merchants and that he had threatened to destroy the home of the Krumrines. Witness also testified that she supported the family, working five days out of each week in order to provide clothes for herself and her children.

Jackson cross-examined his wife but made little progress.

The next witness was Mrs. John Krumrine. Her testimony was to the effect that out of pity for Mrs. Jackson she had given her and her children shelter last Saturday night. That early on Sunday morning she heard Jackson swearing and going on to a terrible rate and threaten to stone the house and break the windows in, if they did not produce his wife and allow her to accompany him home. That he used vile language and treated wife in a shameful manner. She also testified that Jackson threatened to burn half the town down before he was through.

At this point Jackson cross-examined the witness but was glad to beat a hasty retreat before the hot shot that was being poured into him by the witness.

The testimony of John Krumrine was substantially the same. Knew that the defendant was drunk because he had so told him and and related the conversation that had taken place between them.

William Fetters, a neighbor of the Jacksons, testified that the prisoner was an habitual drunkard and a man not fit to live with. This closed the case for the plaintiff.

Jackson was then sworn and when attorney Johnson asked the witness when he was last drunk told him it was none of his business. He however admitted that he drank, and that he was drunk at the present time. He was promptly taken out of the witness chair and the evidence adduced being of sufficient weight to hold the accused, Justice Shuey committed him to Fort Kline there to languish until the next term of court. Jackson was taken to Bellefonte by Constable I. C. Homes.—State College Times.

New Amusement Enterprise.

The management of the Great American Airdome show has decided to close the season on account of word being received from J. C. Goss & Co., canvas maker, at Chicago, from whom a new equipment had been ordered, that it would be impossible to have the same ready for shipment for at least two or three weeks. This show was doing a fine business and was in a prosperous condition up until the night of July 3, when the tent was destroyed by fire, and any report to the contrary is not correct.

L. J. Chamberlain, the manager, is interested in and now arranging for the winter season of the Imperial Stock company in a repertoire of high class plays which will open the latter part of August.

Harvesters Were Delayed.

Wheat has ripened very slowly. Many fields have taken on a rich golden hue, but upon close examination it is found that the stalks are still very green and heavy. Wheat will be a good crop, but it has to be given an opportunity to ripen. Just in proportion as it was delayed by the unreasonable weather of May and early June, it will be late in maturing this year.

Wherever a vantage point is gained in driving over the country and the eye taken in a wide scope of landscape the wheat fields, nearly ripe for the reaper, impart a wonderful charm.

Over the wide panorma, side by side with fields of grass and oats, at nearly regular intervals the fields of waving grain appear, the mellow tints of gold harmonizing pleasantly with the general hues of green that clothe the fields and the mountain sides.

Notwithstanding the unfavorable report earlier in the season the hay crop will be a fair one, where the grass was not crowded out by plantios and other weeds, which sprang up as a result of the peculiar weather conditions in May, the yield will be unusually heavy this season. Where hay making is in progress the crop is found to be at least an average one. With every day the grass takes on a ranker growth and those fields reserved for haymaking after harvest will no doubt yield enormously.

The Tallest Garden Corn.

So far as I take any lowly place in the present pending contest for the distinguished reputation for growing the tallest garden corn stalks in Centre county, it is to me for a little recreative amusement while this heated terms of weather continues or until the stalks stop growing. I am beginning to think that mine will be no more than champion stalks. As yet I see nothing that gives any promise of roasting ears, but only a mass of green stuff of no good to me or mine and costing me no little Scriptual "sweat of the the face." Uncle Tom Laurie shall have the fodder for his cow and I am sure she can turn it into good milk, cream and butter.

Williams will be a great and exceptional feature.

Hot dinner, 35 cts., and supper, 25 cts., furnished by Eighth Ave. Church. Refreshments by Llyswen Methodist. Check room.

Trolley facilities ample; line of cars every seven minutes on each side of town.

All local plans are big, thorough and promising.

Facts Were Exaggerated.

It was rumored in this place Monday that a riot had occurred at a base ball game on Saturday and that several of the participants were so badly hurt that they were taken to the Bellefonte hospital. Inquiry at Howard elicited the information that there was no truth in the report. In the evening after the ball game between the Howard juniors and Romola, some of the boys had a little scrap, but no one was hurt. The fight had no connection with the game, however.

IN CAMP AT TIPTON

All the Commands arrived Friday Morning

14th FIRST TO ARRIVE

Camp opened Saturday morning 8 oclock —The 5th Regiment Last on the Scene.

WILL BE VISITED BY THOUSANDS

The salute of the Stars and Stripes by salvos of artillery is the only thing necessary to declare camp Colonel Homer L. Lindsey, officially opened. This occurred Sat. morning. The commands of the Second brigade were all under the tents at Tipton Friday night and the daily routine was taken up Saturday morning. As the various regiments arrived they found the advance details had done their work and the canvas had been stretched for their accommodation. This work was watched by hundreds of people during the two previous days and the number of on-lookers was largely increased when the regiments began to roll in Friday morning. The early morning hours were busy ones. The Fourteenth regiment was the first to arrive, and then followed the Tenth, Eighteenth and battery B. The Sixteenth, which has a longer way to come was next to the last to get on the grounds. As for the Fifth it was the last in. It is the rule that the regiment which is located nearest to the encampment was the last to arrive on the scene. It is also the one which is the last to go when the camp is at an end. Upon this regiment will depend the cleaning up of the camp—that is to see there is nothing left that is liable to cause sickness.

The Fifth regiment, composed as it is of companies from the central part of the state, is the one in which many of the readers of this paper are interested and they expect that when the camp is over it will be found that the boys will make a good account of themselves. The companies composing it are made up of clerks, mechanics and farmers and they have acquitted themselves excellently heretofore when in camp or any other tour of duty which they have been assigned to. Colonel Taylor will see that they keep up the record heretofore made and what is more excel it.

John Puryear of Richmond was one of Mosby's men in the eventful days when the woods and hills of northern Virginia made the picturesque background for some of the hottest encounters of the civil war. Puryear was a mere stripling when the war began and put on his first long trousers as a wearer of the Confederate gray. Nevertheless, he fought like a veteran. He lacked a veteran's balance, for, although fearless, he had not the slightest judgment, a fact which, says Mr. Munson, the author of "Mosby's Men," Mosby once recognized with considerable humor. All that Puryear knew about war was what he gathered in each mad rush through the ranks of the enemy, with his long black hair flying in the wind and his revolver hot with action. He rode like a centaur, and it is said ever existed that he would not engage, hand to hand, hip and thigh. After one of the most daring rushes Mosby said to him:

"Puryear, I am going to make you a lieutenant for gallantry."

Puryear swept his plumed hat in a bow that was royal in its grace.

"But," continued Colonel Mosby, "I don't want you ever to command any of my men!"

Shark Worship In Hawaii.

The shark has been perhaps the most universally worshiped of all the Hawaiian animal gods. Strange as it may seem, the islanders formerly regarded the shark as being the friend and protector of all those who pay him devout attention. Each locality along the coast of the main islands of the Hawaiian group formerly had its patron shark, whose name, place of abode, history, etc., were all well known to his superstitious worshipers. The biggest and most celebrated of these shark divinities was a male, whose mouth was so large that he could easily swallow any other shark known to frequent those waters. According to the Hawaiian folklore stories, the bulk of this "god of the sea" was so great that he could not pass through the narrowest channels which separate the different islands, but spent his time swimming around the whole group and looking after the welfare of the people.

The Pelican and Its Pouch.

Among the curiosities of nature must be reckoned the pouch of the pelican, which serves equally well as a net with which to scoop up fish and as a bag to convey food to its young. When not in use the bird can contract its pouch so that it is barely discernible, but when it is fully distended it will hold two gallons of water. When the pelican is hunting for food it flies slowly about twenty feet above the surface of the water, scanning its depths for any sign of its prey. As soon as a fish is seen there is a sudden folding of a pair of wings, a downward plunge with the speed of an arrow head first into the sea, the unerring marksman reappearing in a moment and floating on the waves long enough to reveal a glimpse of a fish gliding down its capacious gullet and to shake the water from its dishevelled plumage.

Men and Their Autographs.

An experienced autograph collector can almost tell to what profession a man belongs by the grudgingness or otherwise of his response. Actors and vocalists never demur. They rather seem to like it. Poets and authors of fiction accede, but with a certain cold dignity; metaphysicians and philosophers either refuse altogether or comply with a bad grace; dramatists not only send their autographs, but a quotation from their works as well; peers sign, but with a stiff and formal hauteur; judges and barristers sign in such a way that it is not possible to squeeze an I. O. U. over the name. In fact, every class has—of course, with exceptions—its own way of dealing with the importunity of the autograph fiend.—H. I. Jennings in Connoisseur.

Social Life Long Ago.

The stately dames of the court of Edward IV. rose with the lark, dined at 11 a. m. and retired to rest at 8 in the evening. Henry VIII. went back to 10 in the morning for dinner and had supper at 4. In Queen Bess' days her maids of honor began the day with a round of beef or red herring and a flagon of ale for breakfast at about 6:30 and dined at 11, and then went to the playhouse in the afternoon not later than 2, sometimes as early as 12:30, according to the order of the play and the day.

Two Phases of the Case.

"How long is it going to take to get through with this case?" asked the client, who was under suspicion of housebreaking.

"Well," replied the young lawyer thoughtfully, "it'll take me about two weeks to get through with it, but I'm afraid it's going to take you about four years."

But She Did Tell.

Ella—Bella told me that you told her that secret I told you not to tell her, Stella—She's a mean thing. I told her not to tell you I told her. Ella—Well, I told her I wouldn't tell you she told me, so don't tell her I did.—Judge.

None In Sight.

"Any interesting legends about here?" asked the tourist.

"No," returned the native slowly; "ain't never seen any; though you may find 'em if you hunt in the woods."

Why?

Johnny—Isn't a tin horn made of tin, mamma? Mamma—Certainly it is. Johnny—Then how is it that a fog horn isn't made of fog?

The Ocean Liner Stewardess.

It appears that some stewardesses on the best liners running between Liverpool and New York make from £20 to £30 per month. The average tip varies from 10 shillings to the modest half crown, although occasionally five pound notes change hands. "It is quite true," says a stewardess in a London paper, "that ladies are not nearly so generous as gentlemen. I worked like a slave one trip, night and day, waiting upon an exacting millionaire's wife and children, but they left the ship without giving me even 'Thank you.' I know one stewardess, though, who received £25 as a tip from one of the Vanderbilts, who had his servant standing by him with a satchel of sovereigns, from which all the stewards and other attendants received something. The most generous people are military and civil officers homeward bound from India. Sometimes a rich gentleman passenger falls in love with a stewardess and marries her. But fortunes from tips are rarely made, although a comfortable competency is frequently secured in this way."

Curious Place Names.

Chicago is an Indian word, meaning wild onion or skunk weed. Chesapeake is also Indian and is variously interpreted as highly salted water, great waters or country on a great river. Chautauqua is also an Indian word and has had several interpretations, as a foggy place, a bag tied in the middle (referring to the shape of the lake), a place where a child was washed away, where the fish are taken out, place of easy death or, finally, place where one was lost. Des Moines is usually supposed to refer only to the Trappist monks, and it is also connected with an Indian word meaning the road. Niagara is an Indian word, signifying across the strait or at the neck. Shenandoah is Indian and means the spruce stream or a river flowing alongside of high hills. Massachusetts means near the great hills or the hill shaped like an arrowhead or, again, the blue hills. Mississippi means great water or gathering in of all the waters or an almost endless river spread out.—Leslie's Weekly.

Playthings of Ancient Children.

The most primitive toy is the doll. It dates back to prehistoric times and is found in every part of the world. This one would naturally expect to find. A child, seeing its mother nursing other younger children, would imitate the example with an improvised doll. Toy weapons, again, are older than history. Many of the other toys at present in use date from the earliest times of which we have any record. In the tombs of the ancient Egyptians, along with painted dolls having movable limbs, have been found marbles, leather covered balls, elastic balls and marionettes moved by strings. Ancient Greek tombs furnish clay dolls, toy horses and wooden carts and ships. In the Louvre there are some Greco-Roman dolls of terra cotta with movable joints fastened by wires. Greek babies had rattles. Greek boys played with whipping tops. So did the boys in ancient Rome.

Why Safety Matches Strike on Glass.

There are two reasons why ordinary safety matches can be struck on smooth glass. The head of the safety match is composed of a mixture of sulphide of antimony, chlorate of potassium and powdered glass. A comparatively small increase of temperature will cause this to ignite. Now, glass is a bad conductor of heat, and the rapid passage of the substance over it raises the temperature of that substance sufficiently for that purpose. When the glass is rough the friction crumbles away the loosely combined mixture before the temperature rises to the point of ignition; hence, given the composition of the match head, the two circumstances which answer the question are the comparative smoothness of the glass and its imperfect conductivity of heat.

The Tallest Men of Europe.

The tallest men of Europe are found in Catalonia, Normandy, Yorkshire and the Ardennes district of Belgium. Prussia gets her tallest recruits from Sleswick-Holstein, the original home of the Anglo-Saxons; Austria from the Tyrolese highlands. In Italy the progress of physical degeneration has extended to the upper Apennines, but the Albanian Turks are still an athletic race, and the natives of the Caucasus are as sinewy and gaunt as in the days of the argonauts.

Simple words, short maxims, homely truths, old sayings, are the masters of the world. "Well, I'll have to try one," said the landlady. "I notice a fowl doesn't go far."

A Singular Dream.

A singular dream is related in a well known British magazine. A woman suffering from anxiety caused by reduced circumstances dreamed that she went to church. "The people began to go out one by one. I looked around and inquired why they were leaving the church. They said: 'To look for the magic bird in the churchyard. You will always have luck if you find it.' I thought I would try to find it, went out and swept away the fallen leaves and found a speckled thrush, and as soon as I took it up it dropped £1 in my hand. The next morning I went into our back garden and there among the fallen leaves was the speckled thrush, which had just been killed by a cat. It was yet warm. I said, 'Here is the magic bird, and the money I know will come by post.' The hope was justified, for £1 came in the morning and a check from a friend in the evening."

The Unexpected.

A curious story is that of the late Colonel Harry McCalmont of the British army. He was a poor man when he went to the reading of his uncle's will, hoping that perhaps the departed might have remembered him to the extent of an old watch. True enough, the lawyer read out the words, "To my nephew, Harry McCalmont, I leave my watch and chain." The legatee was satisfied, and, leaning back, he drowsed, lulled by the monotonous tones of the lawyer as he read through the long instrument. At the close he arose to go. "I congratulate you," said the solicitor. "I don't know why you should," said the other. "You are residuary legatee," remarked the lawyer. "You will have £4,000 annually for the first five years from this date, and afterward you will inherit some £7,000,000."

Unlearned, but Wise.

"I'm after justice rather than law," said John Dudley, who for twenty-one years, from 1770 to 1791, was one of the most popular judges of New Hampshire. He was unlearned in the law, and his education was so defective that he could not write five consecutive sentences in correct English, yet so acceptably did he discharge his judicial duties that Chief Justice Parsons of Massachusetts, one of the most learned of lawyers, said of him, "We may smile at his law and ridicule his language, yet Dudley, take him all in all, was the greatest and best judge I ever knew in New Hampshire."

The Strain of the Glass Houses.

"The son of a glassblower is rarely found in the same employment," said a speaker at a child labor conference. "I would rather send my boys straight to hell than send them by way of the glass house," one glassblower is quoted as saying. It appears that the character of the men is greatly affected by the extreme heat and consequent physical strain of the glass houses.

"Did you notice how I moved the audience last night?" asked the amateur elocutionist.

"Moved isn't the proper name for it," rejoined his critical friend. "It was little short of a stampede."

Catching a Thief.

By JUDSON WELLES.

Copyrighted, 1907, by Homer Sprague.

Mornington scowled at the tiny dish of berries before his plate. Sam, his dusky man, smiled apologetically.

"Ahm doin' my bes'," he declared. "Ah shuah would liak to kotch 'em."

"Same here," declared Mornington. "You don't suppose that the people next door take them do you, Sam?"

Sam shook a knowing head. The young ladies, he declared, could not be guilty of such depredations. Ever since they had moved in they had favored Sam with sunny smiles as they passed his yard on the way to the post-office. Sam was their secret slave.

With Mornington it was different. He had resented the appearance of this little colony on the next farm. There were six of them, five girls and an elderly woman, who apparently chaperoned them. Gossip said that they were artists who were spending the summer in the country to sketch, and their daily faring forth with easels and canvases bore out the statement.

Mornington hated artists in general and women artists in particular. He had bought the Torrence farm that he might have quiet, and how could a man have quiet when six chattering women occupied the adjoining farmhouse not 300 feet away?

The strawberry beds had been the last irritation. The previous year he had berries in profusion. This season there were few to be found. The dozen or so in the saucer were all Sam had been able to gather in a day. He was certain that his neighbors raided his garden, and, without announcing his intention to Sam, he rose early the next morning.

The sun had barely risen when he took his place behind the tool house, whence he could command a view of the garden. Presently a slender, girlish figure came hurrying from the other house and entered the plot. Mornington waited until she had filled the pan she carried and was about to go. Then he stepped out with a hail. The girl looked up pleasantly.

"Good morning," she cried. "Won't you have some of our berries?"

"I should like some of mine," he said pointedly.

"Do you grow them, too?" she asked. Mornington marveled at her self possession.

"I grow them," he assented, "or, rather, one of Torrence's men grows them for me. That is as far as I have been able to get this season. I have not eaten many of them."

"We have them every morning," she said briskly. "It's one of the things we moved to the country for, fresh fruit. After being cooped up in studios all season and picking your fruits and vegetables off the dumb waiter it is just heavenly to come out in the garden before breakfast and pick your own berries."

"But don't you think it would be better to find out whose berries you are picking?" he suggested. "Even in the country, property rights obtain."

"These are ours," she declared. "We were very particular in our inquiries."

"Yet the garden belongs to me," he insisted, a little shamefacedly. Somehow his triumph was losing its savor.

"Then we must have been robbing you all this time," she said, with a face suddenly grown as red as the berries in the pan. "I am very sorry."

"It's all right," he said awkwardly, wondering why he had not noticed before what glorious eyes the girl had.

"It is not all right," she said decidedly. "We are not thieves. Please take them. You can send the pan back when you are through."

"Pray accept them with my compliments," he said stupidly. He knew that he was making a fool of himself, and he chafed at the knowledge.

For answer the girl laid the pan on the ground and turned away. Mornington watched her go through the paths to the fence and slip through a broken place. She had the regal bearing of a queen and a face to match. Now he would never have a chance to get acquainted with her, and he suddenly realized that that was the one thing above all others that he most desired.

Shamefacedly he picked up the pan and went back to the house to send Sam over with the fruit. Sam regarded him reproachfully when he had told his tale, but the darky went down the road to the next house and, after a long delay, returned without the pan, but he laid a shining half dollar in Mornington's palm.

"Dey wouldn't take 'em," he explained. "I shuah had t' tak de money."

Mornington flung the money from him with a gesture of disgust and went in to breakfast feeling out of joint with the whole world.

But there was worse yet to come, for in the forenoon Torrence, former owner of the farm, made his appearance with the chaperon from the house next door. With many a "hem" and a "haw" Torrence confessed that finding a chance to clinch the lease of the adjoining farm through the strawberry bed he had told the women that it was a part of the land they had rented. "I honestly meant to speak to you about it, because I knew that you had more berries than you wanted. I was going to pay for what they ate out of the rent," he concluded.

Mornington rose to his feet, and Torrence backed through the door. More than once he had witnessed the city man's [illegible]er, and he had no desire for an exhibition.

Mornington watched him go and then turned to Mrs. Surrey.

"I don't know what I can say to you to excuse my conduct," he began. "I missed the breakfast berries and wanted to put a stop to it, but I did not know that Torrence had claimed my berry patch for his own. May I beg that my apology be the freedom of the berry patch? There are plenty for us both. I am not always a bear, so you need not be afraid to gather them."

When he so wished, Mornington could be very charming, and now he was exerting himself to the full. Mrs. Surrey became gracious, and the upshot was that Mornington accepted an invitation to tea, when he might make his apology in person to Nancy Richmond.

So successful was he that the next morning when he went to pick his own berries he lingered to help her fill her pan. The berry season passed all too quickly, but there were other fruits, and soon there was a well trodden path from Mornington's porch to the doorway of Studio farm. He went with the girls on field trips, and in the pleasant summer evenings he took his guitar and spent the evening on their porch.

Nancy remained his favorite, and the day before they were to break up and return to town he volunteered to help pack.

"Come down to the orchard," he suggested to Nancy, "and get some apples to take back. They will help you to think of the old place while they last."

Nance caught up her sunbonnet. The basket they carried was soon filled with rosy cheeked fruit, but Mornington showed no disposition to return to the house. He leaned against the tree and looked over the strawberry beds.

"I'm going to put up a sign," he said, with a smile, "so that Torrence cannot rent my property or I accuse some one else of theft."

"You were awfully cross that morning," she said, with a reminiscent smile. "I remember I rushed back to the house and declared that I would not stay in the horrid place another day."

"Were you sorry you changed your mind?" he asked softly.

"Not after you found that I was not a thief."

"But you are," he persisted. "You stole my heart."

"I might say the same of you," she declared as he took her hand.

"'Set a thief to catch a thief,'" he quoted. "Have I caught you, dear?"

"I guess you have," she confessed, "though you don't deserve to."

"And next season we will share the strawberries," he declared. "It will be joint ownership then."

She smiled into his eager eyes, and then the sunbonnet eclipsed his face.

Perpetual Motion Cranks.

In the days of the Mayflower the first perpetual motion inventors took out their patents for "Engines which being put in order will cause and mainteyne their own mocions with continuance and without any borrowed force of man, horse, wind, river or brooke," and in the last century they have applied for about 600 patents which are based chiefly on the force of gravity, loss of equilibrium, specific gravity of floats and weights immersed in water or other liquid, accession of receptacles inflated with air or gas under water, compression and subsequent expansion of gases and of the surface tension of liquids. So sanguinely hopeful are these ingenious designers that in many cases they provide brakes to stop their machines if necessary or to prevent any dangerous increase of speed. The care and thought expended on the principle and detail of many of the inventions demonstrate that many men of mental ability cling to the idea that perpetual motion is possible and that they themselves are successfully solving the problem.

How to Shoot a Rattler.

The writer once saw an Indian kill a rattlesnake in a very peculiar manner. The rattler was about ten feet from the Indian, who was resting the rifle on his knee, apparently taking aim. Whenever he moved the weapon a few inches the snake would move around and get exactly in line with it. Then, to show how the thing was done, the Indian moved about the snake in a circle, and the reptile moved as if its tail were on a pivot, always keeping its head and body in line with the gun. The Indian then agreed to bandage his eyes and shoot the snake in the mouth. The writer bandaged the Indian's eyes, and, holding the gun by his side at arm's length, the latter pulled the trigger, and the ball entered the snake's mouth and passed the whole length of its body. "How do you take aim?" was the query. "The snake, he takes aim," was the reply. We have talked with an old hunter on this proposition, and he claims that a rattlesnake will always range directly in line with a gun or stick pointed at it.—Exchange.

Snakes as War Weapons.

When Hannibal, the great Carthaginian, was fighting Eumenes of Pergamos with a fleet of very inferior strength he hit upon an artifice which would scarcely be sanctioned by the laws of what we are pleased to call civilized warfare. He discovered by means of a bogus message under a flag of truce on which ship the king was. He then caused poisonous snakes to be inclosed in earthen jars. These he distributed among several ships and ordered them to close up on the king's galley. In the melee that followed the jars were flung on to the deck. The curious bombs were greeted at first with ridicule, which soon changed to panic when the nature of their contents made itself manifest. The galley was extricated from the fight as soon as possible, and the captains of the others, believing that the king had taken flight, followed suit, with the result that Hannibal gained a complete victory.

Cats as Retrievers.

"It is claimed," said a Chicago antiquary, "that cats may be trained as retrievers—trained to swim to your slain birds and bring them back to you in their mouths. The thing sounds incredible, but look here."

He held up the photograph of an ancient Egyptian painting. Men with spears rode on the Nile. In some of the boats large cats sat on their haunches in the stern, while toward others several cats swam with dead birds in their mouths.

"This picture," said the antiquary, "proves that the Egyptians used cats for hunting dogs. If they, why not we? The original of the picture is in the British museum, where there are also several pieces of carving that display the cat in the role of a retriever."

The German and the Fatherland.

A German always remains a German. He respects and loves his fatherland, although isolated and separated from it by boundless oceans and vast continents. A German heart always remains true to the country where it first commenced to beat until it is silenced by death. As a rule, to which there are few exceptions, a man who is loyal to the country of his birth will be loyal to the country of his adoption.—Dr. Nicholas Senn.

Niagara.

Niagara is a corruption of the Seneca word "neagara," meaning "across the neck," an allusion to a strip of land between the lakes. The name has been subjected to many changes since the discovery of the cataract, more than thirty different readings being found in the writings of the various early explorers and geographers.

HIDDEN DANGER.

Nature Gives Timely Warnings That No Bellefonte Citizen Can Afford to Ignore.

Danger Signal No. 1 comes from the kidney secretions. They will warn you when the kidneys are sick Well kidneys excrete a clear, amber fluid. Sick kidneys send out a thin, pale and foamy or a thick, red, ill-smelling urine, full of ediment and irregular of passage.

Danger Signal No. 2 comes from the back. Back pains, dull and heavy, or sharp and acute, tell you of sick kidneys and warn you of the coming of dropsy, diabetes and Bright's disease. Doan's Kidney Pills cures sick kidneys and cure them permanently. Here's Bellefonte proof.

Mrs. Nancy Davis, of 246 East Logan Street, says: "I suffered a bad fall some years ago when living n Rochester. I thought at first that I had broken my back. I was unable to get up without assistance and from that time I suffered for years with a weak back and excruciating pains through the loins and through the small of my back. Sometimes I was completely prostrated and helpless. Doctors and medicines failed to help me and the pain continued until I got Doan's Kidney Pills. I took only a few doses before I began to feel better and when I had continued using them for a while I was thoroughly cured. My back regained its strength and the pain left me. I have had no return of the trouble since."

The old people of Ebensburg used to tell us that the stones for this house were carried by the women in their aprons while the men built the walls.—Ebensburg Herald.

—The bass fishermen are in hard luck this summer. Ever since the opening of the season there have been nearly continuous rains which have kept the water muddy and a little too high for good fishing. The best that our Isaac Waltons can do is to wait patiently for rains to cease, after which in due time the river will fall and the water become clear. Those who made a study of conditions last spring were of the opinion that the bass would be very plentiful this summer. Therefore when conditions become right fishing no doubt some big hauls will be made.

Will Inspect Grocery Stores In Every City.

Inspectors of the State Agricultural Department are making an inspection of all the wholesale and retail groceries in the state and seeing that they conform with the new pure food laws which have recently been enacted and which require that all goods displayed for sale in bulk or packages, shall bear guarantee of their purity and a statement of their ingredients if they are manufactured from any substance foreign to the original article which they are supposed to represent. While the state department has instructions to enforce the law to the letter, it is well understood that it will take [illegible] for the grocers to dispose of the goods which they had on hand at the time the law went into effect and every assistance is being given to get the law into operation as soon as possible so that there will be no undue activity to secure its enforcement. As the terms of the law are very intricate and might be misunderstood easily by the novice, the inspectors have been given instructions to visit all grocers, and to thoroughly explain all of the different provisions of the law so that there will be no chance for any question to arise in the future which might cause unwarranted delays in bringing its operation to the efficiency which is expected.

She was twice married, her first husband having preceded her to the grave many years ago. Surviving are her husband, James Caldwell, and the following children; James Cornelly, by her first marriage; Mary, John and Thomas, all of Bellefonte. Reunion of Gypsies

A reunion of gypsies will take place about August 1st, near the bridge at Flemington, where a band of travelers is now camping. The event is being looked forward to with much interest by the gypsies, the object of their gathering being, among other things, to consult in reference to the new gypsie law, which requires the payment of a license fee of $50 in every county in which a band camps for any length of time. Next week, it is expected the gypsies will arrive from every direction, and in the opinion of one of the members of the group now camping along the creek, at least 200 will be present at the conference.
